MnIPC declares commitment to offering an alternative to corporate services

ST. PAUL, Minn. – As many credit union leaders evaluate their corporate relationships due to uncertainty within the corporate credit union system, MnIPC has declared its commitment to providing alternative service solutions. MnIPC is an independent check processor dedicated to providing credit unions cost-effective service for processing member share drafts and deposits.

With more than 30 years of experience, MnIPC has led credit unions through extreme swings in the economy and decades of technological change. They are a forward-thinking check processor committed to investing time and resources into providing exemplary service to their clients. Today, that dedication to service continues as they offer credit unions alternative service solutions during this time of uncertainty in the corporate credit union system.

MnIPC understands credit unions' check processing needs and offers flexible settlement arrangements based on where the credit union decides to hold their account. They have the resources and expertise to offer credit unions a variety of services, including share draft processing, return item collection, long-term check image storage and home banking access, check deposit and collection, remote branch capture and merchant capture services.

"In today's uncertain environment, credit unions need a check processor that they can depend on," said MnIPC Vice President Michelle Carlson. "MnIPC is that check processor, and it is committed to serving and supporting credit unions both now and for years to come."
